

September 2020

In March this year I travelled with Meg to the UK. Meg had invited me to help her to promote the project. The plan was to meet with groups of donors and sponsors to talk to them about my experience as a beneficiary of the Kinamba Project which has supported me for 10 years through my education. It is a privilege to be the first Rwandan ambassador for the project. I am honoured to have had the chance to come and meet some of the people who support the project to tell them what the project means to me and others like me who without the project would not have such an opportunity.

I prepared a talk and was supposed to be meeting sponsors to talk about the children they are helping.

Unfortunately, I was not able to attend meetings or meet many sponsors due to the Corona Virus Pandemic but we did arrange three Zoom meetings to talk to some people. This was a new experience for me.

I had a very good time in the UK. I am a keen photographer and I did a lot with that and I am very happy with how much I improved. There were many chances to try my ideas out.

I also enjoyed mountain biking all over the South Lakes area where Meg lives. I love photographing landscapes and this is a perfect place to practise.

Due to the lockdown I had time to develop my editing skills too. I hope you like my pictures.

I Have met some very kind and helpful people during my time in England and I learnt a lot about British culture. I enjoyed some of the food but I missed the avocados!

All of this has been a great experience which I would never have had if it was not for the project and the Superwoman Meg Fletcher who is behind the project and my success.

Now I am back in Kigali ad working for the project which makes me very proud because I can begin to give something back and help others like me to make a future for themselves.

Thank you for everything, Jean.
